What are you trying to reveal to the world in your work?

I feel as though there is always this misconception about sex workers over the authenticity of our work. Even if I am performing something that doesn't appeal to me and my fetishes, I can still see why it does appeal to others, and I can channel and enjoy the experience because of that. I want to show people that yes, really, I do enjoy being as open as I am with myself and my body when I am performing.

I like the feeling of exploring sexuality, and it is liberating to me. Do I enjoy the premise of certain fetishes? At times no, but I enjoy playing and mirroring it with my creativity. That is very real. I have found that I am into a lot more than I initially thought, through my work and the experimentation that has come from it.

What is your definition of "art"?

To me, art is any act, method, image, or other sensory stimulation that evokes some kind of emotion or feeling. Evoking emotion, a universal feeling, in your way, is art. We are a fortunate species to be able to perceive creativity as well as participate in it.

Who is one of your heroes, why, and how do you define heroism?

One of my heroes is my childhood best friend, who held my hand through basically all my conscious life. She taught me about unconditional love, loyalty, and creating a chosen family. Heroism is the ability to act courageously despite the external resistance and adversity you face. Sticking to your morals and being strong-minded is heroic.

How did you become vegan, how did it change your life, and do you advise other people to try veganism?

I was vegetarian since the age of 16 for moral reasons, it didn't feel like a choice to me, I couldn't stomach meat anymore because I knew how ethically wrong it was. I always wanted to be vegan from the beginning. Still, I was only a teenager and in a Latin family, so facilitating my own food at such an extreme level at that time was nearly impossible. Once I began to live on my own and make a lot more money, I was able to commit to a vegan diet. It's been nearly 3 years now!

Veganism has changed my life, being conscious of what you put in your body makes you more in touch with it, and how it reacts to food. Taking care of yourself has holistic implications on your health, mentally and physically. I can never go back, the difference in my health is so dramatic. I think it's something everyone should try, just as an experience. Committing to this type of lifestyle change, 100% isn't possible for everyone. But limiting your animal consumption in any capacity is good for the world and your body :)

Is fashion frivolous or important?

Fashion is both frivolous and important to me. People can live without it, I understand, but I really can't. I have been interested in fashion my whole life and am trying to start making my own clothes. There is something so empowering about translating how you feel inside on the outside and integrating your own unique features as part of the fashion.

How would you describe your style and style inspirations?

My style is a little frivolous, actually! I have a very specific color scheme in my wardrobe, pairing reds and pinks with whites and blacks. I usually wear a lot of pink most of the time. I also really enjoy different tactile combinations in my clothes, like faux fur, fishnet, suede, cashmere, etc. I have recently realized a lot of my style is appropriating lingerie as clothing!

Being a sex worker and also being from the hot and humid city of Miami has really influenced how I dress. I wear pretty revealing clothes, as the norm in Miami. Moving from there was a culture shock because of how many people were surprised by how much skin I expose. I like using the combination of cute and sexy to kind of say "Hey! I'm a normal girl just like you, but I'm also kind of an exhibitionist freak!"

How would you sum up your life philosophy?

My life philosophy is all about balance. I feel like embracing the duality of your nature is the key to happiness, like having the right amount of responsibility versus indulgence, for example. It's so hard to find your own personal balance, but once you do, you're unshakable. Also, do whatever you want as long as it keeps your conscious clear.

What's the best way to relax?

I'm a self-proclaimed professional relaxer, it's both a good thing and a bad thing. I like going to the Korean spa and sitting in silence for a few hours while you rotate between the saunas and hot tubs. It's truly a meditative experience.

What's one life lesson you've learned through experience that you think anyone, and everyone can also learn from?

Don't ignore your thoughts or body, you can overdo anything. Intuition is your biggest gift and guide in life.

What is your definition of a "perfect life"?

A perfect life for me would be able to keep a good balance of personal fulfillment and success! I feel like that is the most challenging dynamic we face.
